Multiage wilderness
education classes now open
just east of Duvall, Washington

Tracks & Tales Nature School is designed to give children a foundation in outdoor exploration and creative expression by using games, songs, stories, art projects, and the natural bounty of our northwest forests.

In the past decade, more and more people have been turning to "nature education." Books such as Nature Deficit Disorder by Richard Louv, Sharing Nature with Children by Joseph Cornell, and Coyote's Guide to Connecting Kids with Nature by Jon Young and Ellen Haas, help teach the lost art of tracking, exploring edible and medicinal plants, and other nearly forgotten practices that bring each of us into balance with the Earth, ourselves, and our community.

We currently offer a program from 10am to 2pm on Wednesdays to supplement your child's education. Our instructors are trained at Duvall's nationally acclaimed Wilderness Awareness School. As our school grows, we will be offering academics and more in-depth programs while always keeping our focus on nurturing nature, community and self.

Because children learn best from following and teaching other children, we use a multiage approach and are open to children of all ages. Children less than 30 months old need to be accompanied by a parent or caregiver. Our child / teacher ratio is never more than 8 to 1.

Program	Time	Day	Fee
Midday Program	10am - 2pm	Wednesdays	$130/month
